To Whom It May Concern,

The National Union of Students fights for a world without discrimination or prejudice. NUS has a long history of fighting for the rights of minorities and the oppressed to study at universities across Australia.

At the 2008 Annual NUS Conference students passed a motion endorsing the campaign for a return of a dedicated prayer room on the Swanston Street Campus. NUS wholeheartedly supports the RMIT Islamic Society in their efforts, as do I the President of the National Union of Students.

NUS is concerned that students have not had adequate areas to pray and especially concerned about the effect of this on Muslim women.

NUS hopes that this issue is resolved quickly to the satisfaction of the RMIT student community.

Regards,

David Barrow
